emotional Freddie Freeman took time to personally thank his hometown Atlanta Braves fans for all they have done for him over the years.

Freeman was among the 13 players who announced his retirement from baseball on Friday, and in an emotional speech at Turner Field, the former MVP and fan-favorite said he was leaving with “a heavy heart.” “Like I said from the very beginning, baseball is what I love, but Atlanta is where I live, and I want to thank you for loving me and supporting me,” Freeman said. “I want to thank you for allowing me to live my dream in Atlanta,” he added. “This is where I grew up, this is where my parents raised me, and this is where I will always be a Braves fan.” Freeman, a former sixth overall pick, was Atlanta’s first All-Star since 2007, and appeared in six All-Star Games for the Braves. He was also a four-time

Silver Slugger winner in Atlanta, and won two National League MVPs (2013, 2016). Freeman also played for the Washington Nationals, St. Louis Cardinals, Tampa Bay Rays, Chicago Cubs and the New York Yankees. He was traded by the Cubs to the Yankees this offseason. Freeman's Braves career included five straight 20-home run seasons and won the 2017 World Series. But his final season will not go as many fans hoped. The 35-year-old Freeman hit .215 in 2019 with five home runs and 22 RBI. CLICK HERE FOR MORE SPORTS COVERAGE ON FOXNEWS.COM

Freeman played just 523 games in the regular season for the Braves, but hit .284 in that span with a career-high 28 home runs.

Freeman has been plagued by knee problems in recent years, as well
